

Application for Exemption

Information: Competition for admission to the Stockholm School of Economics (SSE) is intense, and SSE seeks to ensure that all available places are used effectively. Therefore, a decision was made in December 2016 that an individual who has previously been enrolled in a program at SSE may not be admitted again to a program at the same level.

However, an exemption from this rule may be granted if exceptional circumstances¹ apply. You may apply for such an exemption using this form by explaining why you believe exceptional circumstances exist in your case.

Please attach supporting documentation that verifies the circumstances referred to in your application.

Full name and SSE registration number:
Program at SSE in which you were previously enrolled:
Year of Enrolment:
Why do you believe that an exemption should be granted to allow you to be admitted to a program at the same level once again? Please provide a detailed explanation.

The completed application must be submitted to SSE in accordance with the agreed deadline.

¹ Exceptional circumstances refer to situations such as legally valid impediments, hospitalization, parental leave, illness, or other circumstances that have prevented the applicant from pursuing studies at the Stockholm School of Economics over an extended period. Employment, professional assignments, studies at another institution, or similar commitments are not regarded as exceptional circumstances.
