NEWSLETTER

Well into the fall term of 2020 we would like to share some highlights from what has been happening at the Swedish House of Finance.

Each crisis usually sheds a light on how well areas are functioning. What this crisis brought out was the importance of having a top tier financial research center in Sweden. Quick access to our researchers knowledge combined with our extensive network in the public and private financial market, allowed for thorough discussions and gave guidance to deal with the recent economic challenges. We managed to move quickly online with our activities, and continue to build our digital presence.

What are the costs and benefits of shareholder Democracy?

Professor Mariassunta Giannetti's and co-author Professor Nickolay Gantchev's paper shows that, in firms with strong corporate governance, low-cost shareholders activism can be beneficial. But this requires that investors collect information and are able to discern between good and bad shareholder proposals.

Skandia Award 2020

What are the effects of the Federal Reserve on the stock market? A lot of information reaches markets via informal communications channels, as opposed to announcements or speeches. Studies show that policy-maker interactions are most closely linked to stock returns. The 2020 Prize recipient Professor Annette Vissing-Jorgensen will give a presentation on November 19, at 16.30.

About Us

The Swedish House of Finance at the Stockholm School of Economics is Sweden's national research center for financial economics. It hosts internationally distinguished researchers, and enables financial research and development of the highest quality.

The center serves as an independent platform where academia and both the private and public financial sectors can exchange knowledge, foster new ideas and gain access to a global network of the most prominent researchers in finance.

The Swedish House of Finance is an equally private and government funded, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization. It hosts approximately 70 researchers, consisting of resident and affiliated professors as well as PhD students.
