

A note on SHoF's Women-in-Finance data

We have collected data from websites of the global top 100 and European top 50 research institutions according to the UT Dallas Business School Ranking based on publications in the JF, JFE, and RFS in 2018–2020. The sample includes 133 institutions (156 sub-entities and 216 URLs) from 20 countries and covers 5,653 researchers. The data is collected in June 2021.

Table 1 shows that fraction representation varies across countries, ranging from 30.1 percent in Australia to 0.0 percent in Cyprus, with a (weighted) average of 20.3 percent. It is also noteworthy that American researchers make up about half of the sample.

Table 1. Summary statistics for the 20 countries in the sample.

All 5,653 researchers are sorted into one of the following hierarchical levels: (1) Professor, (2) Associate Professor, (3) Assistant Professor, (4) Lecturer, (5) Research Fellow, and (6) Research Associate. Many institutions and countries have their own non-standard terminology to name the positions of their researchers, oftentimes with multiple terms for the same hierarchical level. We use a text mining tool to extract the hierarchical level from the information available on the institutions' websites, see Table 2 for examples.

Table 3 shows that there are fewer women in senior positions, such as professors (12.1%), compared to junior positions, such as assistant professors (28.3%) and research associates (27.3%). The latter group includes many PhD students
